DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).
3. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yashima (U.S. 5,685,949).

Referring to column 8, lines 16-22, Yashima discloses a silicon electrode plate for plasma etching with superior durability, the silicon electrode plate comprising silicon single crystal which contain boron and phosphorus ( $10^{15}$  atoms/cm<sup>3</sup> or more).

Yashima fails to teach a silicon electrode plate which contains the specific atomic ratio of 3 to 11 ppba of boron, and further contains a total of 0.5 to 6 ppba of phosphorus; yet, it is still obvious. However, a prima facie case of obviousness still exists because it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to optimize the (concentration of boron and phosphorus) during routine experimentation depending upon, for example, the desired plasma characteristic (i.e. enhanced electrical conductivity, heat resistance, and corrosion resistance), and would not lend patentability to the instant application absent the showing of unexpected results. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the specific atomic ratio of boron and phosphorus of Yashima to contain 3 to 11 ppba of boron, and further contains a total of 0.5 to 6 ppba of phosphorus since this would enhance plasma characteristics such as electrical conductivity, heat resistance, and corrosion resistance.
